vintage vip.

thanx god I'm a vip is going back to its roots: sylvie chateignier is opening up a new vintage concept store. while sylvie started her first shop back in 1994 (when 10-year-old me was wearing vintage overalls without knowing how cool that was), tgv more recently made a name for itself by throwing legendary parties:

but they are clever people (they're vip for a reason) and know that we also need to throw something on to party (or at least that's the case at most parties I've been to...) and especially if it's one of their orgies of stylishness, you won't turn heads by just wearing black and sucking in your cheekbones. et voilà - that's what sylvie's store is for: the real deal (vintage chanel, lanvin, dior, ungaro, ysl, givenchy,...). now she only has to print a magazine and open a performance space in her shop to acquire hipster world domination.

a bit dark and uninspiring, i dare say, but we will have to see for ourselves at the opening on the 25th of september. till then watch the video above and get into the mood.

address: 12 rue de lancry / 75010 paris / metro: république, jacques bonsergent / opening hours: tuesday - saturday, 12.00 - 19.30 / phone: +33 1 42 03 02 09.
